 John,
 Go ahead and get this fixed. It can't be too expensive, but it sounds like the lock mechanism is defective which may need a mechanic.
 I would ask the mechanic first for advice before employing a locksmith and have the same problem again.
 Does everyone agree?

 Thanks!

  John, if you had this problem before and knew someone that came and fixed it . . . I would advise doing that once again.  I assume there would be a consensus here which agrees.  I¹ll give you a call after sending this.
  Thanks.

   Good Morning Jim,

   I wanted to inform you that last night while one of my supervisors was patrolling, he wasn't able to take out the key out of the ignition. It took him 30 mins to work on that, then other 15 mins to even start the the office. Am afraid that it might be the same issue where we needed a lock smith to come take a
